

SUPERSTITION and LUCK Pt.3: CHARMS, AMULETS, TALISMANS, THE ITALIAN HORN, THE EVIL EYE, THE HAMSA, WITCHCRAFT

CHARMS, AMULETS and TALISMANS

Amulets

A form of defense that protects the wearer or their possessions from evil forces. Amulets can be made from natural materials like precious stones, bones, or animal teeth, or from man-made materials like religious medallions. 🔗

Talismans

A form of offense that helps the wearer's own powers. Talismans are often portable objects, but can also be permanently installed in architecture. Talismans are believed to bring good fortune, protect, heal, or harm people. 🔗

Charms

A practice or expression that is believed to have magic power. Charms are often worn to ward off evil or ensure good fortune. In modern times, charms are often collected and can have specific meanings or hold memories for the wearer. 🔗

Amulet – a form of defense that protects the wearer or their possessions from evil forces. Amulets can be made from natural materials like precious stones, bones, or animal teeth, or from man-made materials like religious medallions.

Amulets are also thought to bring good luck.

Talismans – A form of offense that helps the wearer's own powers. Talismans are often portable objects, but can also be permanently installed in architecture. Talismans are believed to bring good fortune, protect, heal, or harm people.

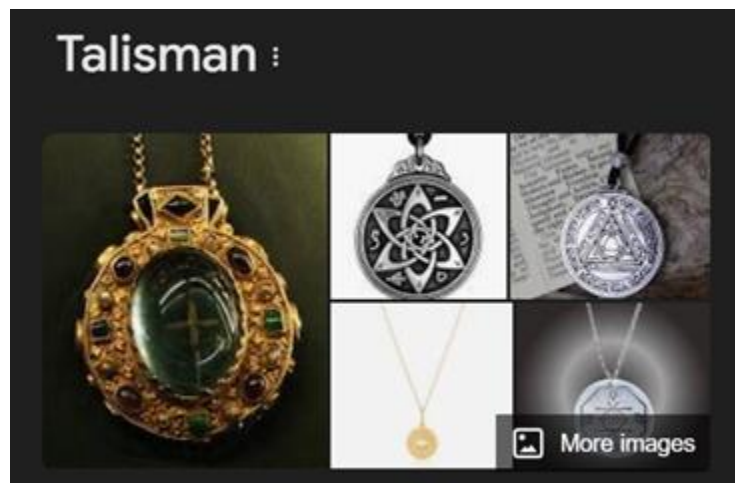

Charms – I just want to focus on the second sentence that deals with physical charms – they are often worn to ward off evil or ensure good fortune.

Each one of these is believed to have special powers or that is magical powers. Witches do rituals over them to charge them, some of them come from natural sources that witches believe gives them power naturally because they serve elemental spirits which are demons.

Let's look at a few examples:

Carrying a rabbit's foot as an amulet or talisman, is believed to bring good luck in many cultures. Not so lucky for the rabbit – this is witchcraft.

These are examples of talismans that people would wear. The wearer would have a specific intention or focus in mind paired with the talisman believing for their desired outcome to happen. So they believe in their own powers to manifest through this process. To me this sounds like the false teaching that we are gods and we have the power to manifest whatever we want, that's New Age.

THE ITALIAN HORN

The Italian horn, also known as the cornicello, is a symbol in Italian culture that represents good luck, protection, and prosperity. It's often worn as jewelry, but can also be displayed in cars, on streets, or in cremation urns. The horn is said to protect against the evil eye, or malocchio in Italian, as well as bad luck, fruit-bearing trees, milking animals, and a man's masculinity. It's also linked to fertility and virility. 🔗

The Italian horn, also known as the cornicello, is a symbol in Italian culture that represents good luck, protection and prosperity. It's often worn as jewelry, but can also be displayed in cars, on streets, or in cremation urns. The horn is said to protect against the evil eye, or malocchio in Italian, as well as bad luck, fruit bearing trees, milking animals, and a man's masculinity. It's also linked to fertility and virility.

God is our Protector, not some charm, talisman or amulet. I did find that these terms many times are being used interchangeably online.

Psalms 18:1-3 – To the chief Musician, A Psalm of David, the servant of the LORD, who spake unto the LORD the words of this song in the day that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul: And he said, I will love thee, O LORD, my strength. The LORD is my rock, and my fortress, and my deliverer; my God, my strength, in whom I will trust; my buckler, and the horn of my salvation, and my high tower. I will call upon the LORD, who is worthy to be praised: so shall I be saved from mine enemies.

Who delivered King David from all his enemies, God did. King David looked to God as his Protector.

1 John 5:18-19 – We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not. And we know that we are of God, and the whole world lieth in wickedness.

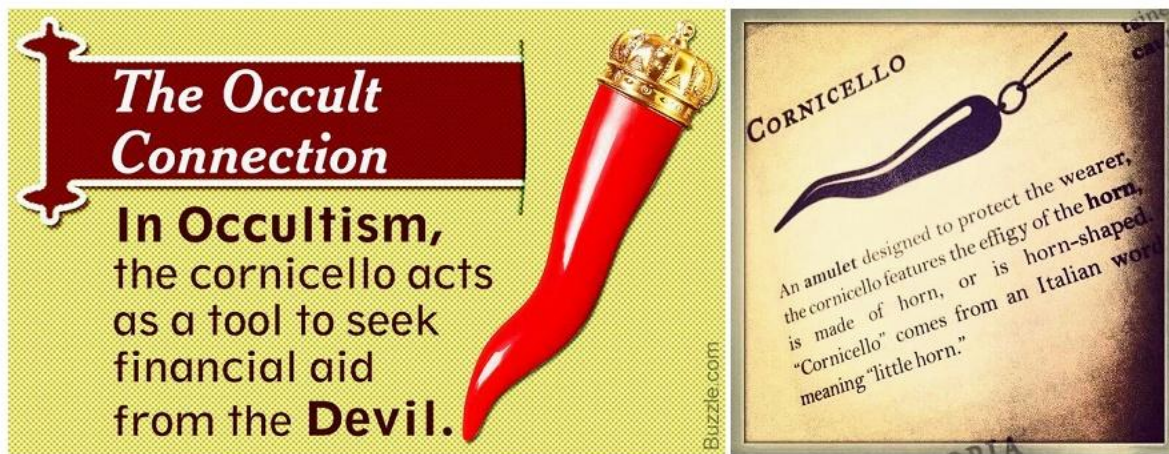

As God's children we do not make a practice of sinning – that is what is meant when it says we don't sin. Jesus keeps us secure and satan cannot overtake us – just as Jesus protected Peter when satan wanted to sift him as wheat. We are of God but the whole world around us is in the control of the evil one, satan.

The Bible tells us over and over that when we obey God He will provide for us and meet our needs. (Philippians 4:19, Matt.6:31-33)

The Italian horn protects fruit bearing trees and milking animals: God brings the rains on the just and unjust alike (Matt.5:45) and even though we have weather manipulation, when we need rain we turn to God because ultimately He is in control of all things. So we trust God for the increase of our crops, not a charm or talisman that is linked to an evil, demonic supernatural power. As for our livestock, milking animals, we live obedient lives and honor God with what He has blessed us with and He protects and blesses all that we have and that would include our pets and livestock.

We also know from reading The Old Testament that when a couple was barren, they would turn to God in prayer and He is the One Who would open the womb or cause an old man to still be fruitful. (Genesis 25:21, Genesis 30:22, Romans 4:19, Luke 1:18-25) He is The One Who blesses us with our children. (Psalm 127:3-5)

The occult connection – in occultism, the cornicello acts as a tool to seek financial aid from the devil. An amulet designed to protect the wearer, the cornicello features, the effigy of the horn, is made of horn, or is horn-shaped. "Cornicello" comes from an Italian word meaning "little horn."

In Scripture the “little horn” is connected directly to satan: Some say the little horn was Antiochus Epiphanes, some say it is Rome and some believe it is pointing to a future fulfillment in the antichrist.

When you turn to anyone or anything except God in looking for blessing which the world calls luck, or protection or anything else, you are seeking to the kingdom of darkness.

Pastor Erustus shared the following: Some people bury objects in homes at the gates, at door entrances, some hang objects on doors of homes, wear some on hands, neck or waists for protection from enemies or to bring good luck or good profit in business. Anyone who uses such is involving demons in his/her life or home. Our power and protection is in Christ Jesus alone.

Let’s look at a few more examples of this type of thing:

Red bracelets have had many meanings throughout history, including:

Luck, protection, and good fortune: The color red has been associated with these meanings since the early 1900s.

Those who practice kabbalah, which is witchcraft, wear red bracelets.

Madonna, Lisa Rinna, Ashton Kutcher, Demi Moore, Angelina Jolie and Lindsay Lohan. All these people serve on satan’s altar and they are required to show honor and allegiance to him time and again a few ways they do this is by their hand signs and gestures, by these red bracelets but mostly by the worship and sacrifices they give him. They live their lives as a tribute to him to lead many to destruction and away from Christ. He uses them to lead people to idolize them, lust after them and align themselves with what they think and believe which has nothing to do with Christ.

evil eye

Wearing a thin scarlet or a crimson string (Hebrew: חוט השני, khutt hashani) as a type of talisman is a Jewish folk custom which is practiced as a way to ward off misfortune which is brought about by the "evil eye" (Hebrew: עין הרע).

Wikipedia

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Red_string_\(Kabbalah\))

Red string (Kabbalah) - Wikipedia

Wearing a thin scarlet or crimson string as a type of talisman is a Jewish folk custom which is practiced as a way to ward off misfortune which is brought about by the "evil eye".

The custom of wearing red strings is associated with Lilith, Adam's first wife, and is part of Jewish traditions as follows:

Warding off Lilith – In some Jewish traditions, mothers would tie a red string around their baby's wrist to protect the child from Lilith, who promised to punish the children of Adam and Eve.

Lilith's red ribbon – In Dante Gabriel Rosseti's Lady Lilith, Lilith wears a red ribbon on her left wrist, which is a reference to the custom of mothers tying red strings around their babies' wrists.

Rachel's Tomb – In the late 1800s, people began performing a ritual of winding red string around Rachel's tomb. Some believed the string had magical properties and could be used to heal the sick.

Wearing a red string is also a Jewish folk custom associated with Kabbalah and religious Judaism. The red string is thought to ward off misfortune caused by the "evil eye". It is usually made from thin scarlet wool thread and worn as a bracelet or band on the wrist.

Red strings are also significant in other cultures and traditions, including Hinduism and Buddhism. In Hinduism, the red string symbolizes good luck and protection. In Buddhism, the red string is a reminder to stay connected to one's spiritual path.

You may be saying what are you talking about with this Lilith character? Judaism is witchcraft and has all sorts of beliefs that are against God and not in line with His Word. Lilith is in the belief system of the Jews who don't love and serve Christ. Sister Janet asked me to do a teaching on Lilith and one day if The Lord wills maybe I will be able to get to it, I haven't forgotten. She is part of the fallen angel - false goddess gang. Regarding healing coming from wearing a red string or amulets or charms – Christ is The Healer, by His stripes we are healed. (Isaiah 53:5) The red string is supposed to protect the wearer from the evil eye.

THE EVIL EYE

The evil eye is a curse that involves a malicious or envious look that is believed to cause bad luck, injury, or death to the victim. It is a superstition that is ancient and widespread, and can be found in many cultures, including Greek, Roman, Jewish, Islamic, Hindu, and Buddhist.

The evil eye is often cast by someone who is jealous of another person's success, beauty, or wealth. The perpetrator is usually thought to have supernatural powers, but in some cultures, the evil eye can be cast unintentionally. Children, pregnant women, and animals are often considered to be especially susceptible to the evil eye.

To ward off the evil eye, people use apotropaic objects, such as the fascinus, which is a phallic charm that can be worn as a pendant or finger ring, or carved into stone for use on buildings, mosaics, or wind chimes. In Turkey, blue glass amulets are used to protect against the evil eye. The color blue is associated with protection, while light blue symbolizes truth.

The evil eye is a curse that involves a malicious or envious look that is believed to cause bad luck, injury, or death to the victim. It is a superstition that is ancient and widespread, and can be found in many cultures, including Greek, Roman, Jewish, Islamic, Hindu, and Buddhist.

The evil eye is often cast by someone who is jealous of another person's success, beauty, or wealth. The perpetrator is usually thought to have supernatural powers, but in some cultures, the evil eye can be cast unintentionally. Children, pregnant women, and animals are often considered to be especially susceptible to the evil eye.

To ward off the evil eye, people use apotropaic objects, such as the fascinus, which is a phallic charm that can be worn as a pendant or finger ring, or carved into stone for use on buildings, mosaics, or wind chimes. In Turkey, blue glass amulets are used to protect against the evil eye. The color blue is associated with protection, while light blue symbolizes truth.

 I apologize for the words here and the upcoming words in regards to sexual anatomy. In case you didn't get a hold of that, they were wearing the male anatomy as a charm on their person to ward off the evil eye.

The fascinus was used in ancient Roman culture as a protection charm and to represent the Roman fertility deity, Fascinus: [\[link\]](#)

Definition

The fascinus was a phallus-shaped amulet or effigy that represented the divine phallus. It was also used to refer to the spells used to invoke the divine protection of Fascinus. [\[link\]](#)

Uses

The fascinus was worn as a protection charm by soldiers and male children. It was also placed in gardens and on hearths to protect against the evil eye. Smiths would also place the fascinus in front of their forges. [\[link\]](#)

Prevalence

Phallic imagery was very common in Roman culture, appearing in many forms, including stone buildings, pottery, mosaics, figurines, windchimes, and jewelry. [\[link\]](#)

Origin

The Romans inherited the use of phallic symbols from their Hellenistic and Classical predecessors, but they created their own new forms and uses for the symbol. [\[link\]](#)

The fascinus was used in ancient Roman culture as a protection charm and to represent the Roman fertility deity, Fascinus: Right here we see there is fallen angel worship going on with this deity represented by the male anatomy.

Definition – The fascinus was a phallus shaped amulet or effigy that represented the divine phallus. It was also used to refer to the spells used to invoke the divine protection of Fascinus.

Uses – The fascinus was worn as a protection charm by soldiers and male children. It was also placed in gardens and on hearths to protect against the evil eye. Smiths would also place the fascinus in front of their forges.

Prevalence – Phallic imagery was very common in Roman culture, appearing in many forms, including stone buildings, pottery, mosaics, figurines, windchimes, and jewelry.

Origin – The Romans inherited the use of phallic symbols from their Hellenistic and Classical predecessors, but they created their own new forms and uses for the symbol.

In my research over the years I have seen parks in foreign countries that are filled with images of the male anatomy. Looking up this false fertility deity Fascinus, there were many images of the male anatomy that had been worn by people in ancient times and still are today, there are modern forms of this now for necklaces etc. I see this in Freemasonry, not the local good old boy down the street lodges near all of us but the upper echelon lodges where there are those that know the esoteric meaning of all the freemasonic symbols and not the smoke screen meaning that is given to those of the lower degrees which is called the exoteric meaning. Freemasonry at its core is a fertility cult based on Judaism. Those that know the esoteric meaning are sodomites. So it makes sense for this deity to be one of their gods. When I did the teaching on the word amen, which is another name for satan and Egyptian pharaohs who named themselves after him, there were depictions of the false god “amen” as a phallic deity.

That's Fascinating...

Exploring Phallic Amulets in the Ancient and Modern Contexts

Protective amulets depicting the divine phallus were common in ancient Rome. Worn as pendants or used as a decorative motif to ward off the evil eye, the "fascinus" (or "fascinum") was typically represented as a penis combined with various human or animal body parts such as wings, legs or testicles.

This example (below, right) is from the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art: "This ornament probably hung as a charm from a tintinnabulum, a wind chime adorned with bells and intended to ward off evil. These phallic tintinnabula were doubly apotropaic, the protective effect of the phallus strengthened by the ringing of the bells. The phallus on these objects could take many different forms, transforming into a wolf, dog, beast, lion, monster, or winged creature."

Apotropaic March 30 - That's Fascinating...

Exploring phallic amulets in the ancient and modern contexts

Protective amulets depicting the divine phallus were common in ancient Rome. Worn as pendants or used as a decorative motif to ward off the evil eye, the "fascinus" (or "Fascinum") was typically represented as a penis combined with various human or animal body parts such as wings, legs or testicles.

This example (below, right – I'm not showing it here) is from the collection of the Metropolitan Museum of Art: "This ornament probably hung as a charm from a tintinnabulum, a wind chime adorned with bells and intended to ward off evil. These phallic tintinnabula were doubly apotropaic, the protective effect of the phallus strengthened by the ringing of the bells. The phallus on these objects could take many different forms, transforming into a wolf, dog, beast, lion, monster, or winged creature."

This thing they call a tintinnabulum was a wind chime with an image of the male anatomy hanging from it along with the regular chimes and that's why they said it was doubly apotropaic because they believed the sound of chimes or bells was protective against evil and they believed the same thing about the image of the male anatomy.

Apotropaic magic :

Apotropaic magic or protective magic is a type of magic intended to turn away harm or evil influences, as in deflecting misfortune or averting the evil eye. Wikipedia

Let's have a refresher about what the word apotropaic means. Apotropaic magic or protective magic is a type of magic intended to turn away harm or evil influences, as in deflecting misfortune or averting the evil eye. Witches have markings that they make sometimes on buildings or other places as protective marks and they are called apotropaic markings.

This is a hamsa hand with an evil eye in the palm of it. This isn't just jewelry it is occult jewelry. In fact, all the jewelry I'm speaking about here is occult jewelry. A few weeks ago we were at the beach and I went into a local souvenir shop and saw some cute bracelets. I thought they were cute until I got closer and saw what they were. I showed them to Kennedy and told her they were wicked with the evil eye on them and the hamsa hand was on some of them. I knew these things were of the occult and tied to witchcraft and superstition. I managed to find a cute little colorful bracelet that didn't have that filth on it. They market this stuff out in so many places and ways. How many people buy this stuff just thinking it is cool or cute and don't even realize they have invited demons into their lives because of it.

The hamsa, also known as the hand of Fatima or the hand of Miriam, is a palm-shaped amulet that is used as a symbol of protection in Jewish and Muslim cultures. The word "hamsa" comes from an Arabic word that means "five" and represents the five fingers of the human hand. The symbol has many meanings, including:

- Protection: The hamsa is believed to ward off evil forces, especially the "evil eye". Some also use it to protect pregnant women or strengthen the weak.
- Good luck: The hamsa is often seen as a good luck charm.

The hamsa, also known as the hand of Fatima, that was the daughter of Mohammed whom they call a prophet in Islam, or the hand of Miriam – Moses' sister. It is a palm-shaped amulet that is used as a symbol of protection in Jewish and Muslim cultures. The word "hamsa" comes from an Arabic word that means "five" and represents the five fingers of the human hand. The symbol has many meanings, including:

Protection: The hamsa is believed to ward off evil forces, especially the "evil eye." Some also use it to protect pregnant women or strengthen the weak.

Good luck: The hamsa is often seen as a good luck charm.

Look at these huge hamsa hand - evil eye wall hangings. It is believed that when the eye cracks or breaks, it's thought to have absorbed the bad energy and protected you from harm.

Evil Eye

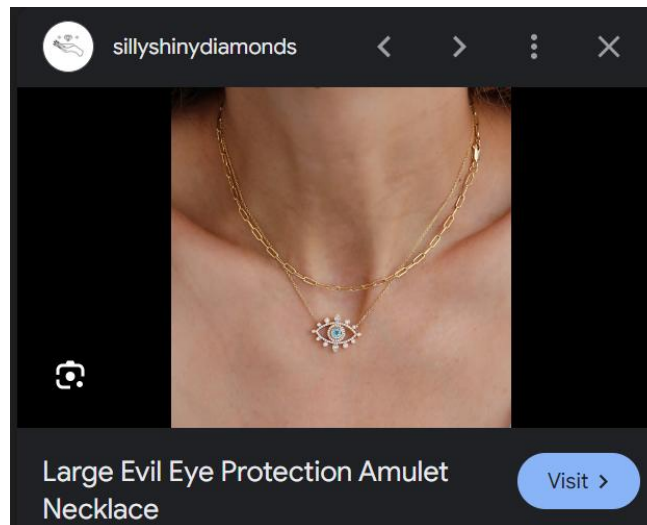

The meaning of Evil Eye jewellery is that they are designed to protect the wearer from evil and ward off the evil that has been directed at them.

Wearing any piece of jewellery with the Evil Eye symbol on it provides the wearer with both power and protection against evil spirits or bad luck.

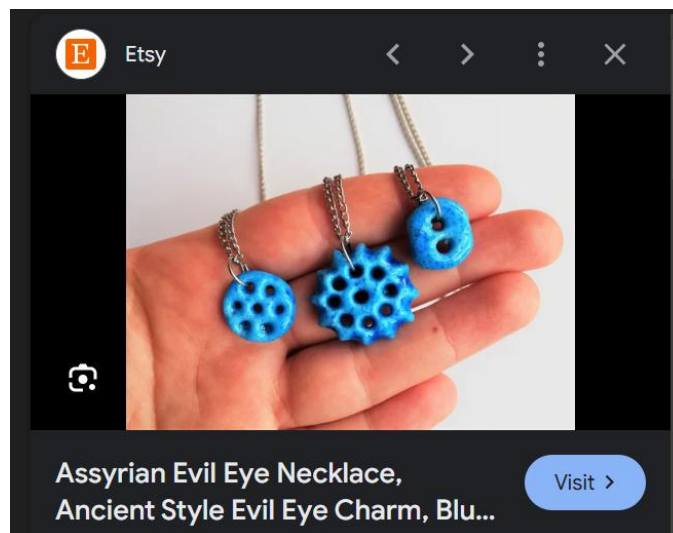

The meaning of evil eye jewelry is that they are designed to protect the wearer from evil and ward off the evil that has been directed at them. Wearing any piece of jewelry with the evil eye symbol on it provides the wearer with both power and protection against evil spirits or bad luck. The truth is the exact opposite, the wearer will not have control and power over evil spirits but rather these things are gateways for the demon to have access into the wearer's or owner's life.

Large evil eye protection amulet necklace. This stuff is everywhere you guys. This does not protect anyone. It is like a demon magnet.

The belief of the evil eye is strong in Assyrians.

A blue/turquoise bead with two, seven or nine small holes resembling eyes around a necklace is often worn and is said to be protection from the evil eye. Some may also spit three times without saliva.

The Assyrians took the northern kingdom of Israel – the 10 tribes captive. This was one of the pagan nations that the Israelites learned pagan worship from.

(Ezekiel 23:12)

A spirit can follow an object if it has been summoned to it or if the object represents it. That is what sigils are all about and the witch markings and company logo's and names etc. The luciferians are at work honoring their god satan and drawing demons to the things people buy. Be aware of what you are buying, look at what is in your home and know the meaning of it, research and get rid of ungodly things.

The charms, amulets and talismans I have been talking about today, each one represents a demon, a fallen angel. That fallen angel will be drawn to the items, symbols, sigils, logos etc. that represent them. Those demonic things are points of contact for the demons.

This magical power that is being associated with these things is witchcraft. Magic and witchcraft mean the same thing – magic is another word I would get out of your vocabulary as a Christian. When you believe in these things to ward off evil spirits, or to protect you or to bring good luck or to heal you, you are in sin against God. The sin of idolatry and you are breaking the first commandment. Each symbol, charm, amulet, talisman, sigil is linked to a demon. You have turned to a supernatural power that is not Christ.

Believing in all of these things to bring you luck or to protect you is not really believing in Christ. You are putting your belief into satan's system of worship when you believe in these things.

CLOSING

Christ secured our victory over the supernatural powers of this current dark age. We as Christians, trust in Him alone and know that we are loved, protected and have the victory already through the finished work of Christ on the cross as long as we live righteous, obedient lives. We do not put our trust in objects, charms, amulets or talismans. We do not wear these things on our person believing for healing or protection or to ward off anything from satan's kingdom including bad luck.

PRAYER

<https://www.houseofgoodfortune.org/bonheur-blog/fascinating>